Applications are invited for a Term Adjunct position at the rank of Assistant Professor in the Aging and Health (AGHE) program, with responsibilities for 100% of course delivery of AGHE 819 – Planning for Age Friendly Communities. The position is available from April 1, 2024, to August 31, 2024.

AGHE 819 is a masters-level course, with expected delivery during the summer term (May through to August 2024), and a maximum anticipated enrolment of 25 students. We are starting the contract early to allow the incumbent time to prepare for the course launch. The course is offered as an elective for Graduate Diploma and Masters-level students in the AGHE program. The incumbent will have 100% responsibility for course delivery. For more information about the responsibilities of this position, please contact Dr. Tracy Trothen, Professor, School of Rehabilitation Therapy, at trothent@queensu.ca.

The successful candidate will have theoretical, methodological, and practical expertise in the environmental conditions and policy contexts that create or impede opportunities for healthy aging at the local level. The candidate will be abreast of current research within the field. The candidate must have completed a doctoral-level degree (e.g., PhD, EdD). Previous experience teaching at the graduate level, in an online environment, is preferred.

The course description follows:

AGHE 819 (CR 3)  Planning for Age Friendly Communities

This course will introduce students to the environmental conditions and policy contexts that create or impede opportunities for healthy aging at the local level. Applying a determinants of health perspective, various dimensions of age friendly communities will be examined, such as community design, housing, transportation and mobility, recreation, social and civic participation, and social inclusion.
